Frozen Bits For Horses' Mouths. Let any one who has the care of a horse these cold, frosty mornings deliberately grasp in his hand a piece of iron; indeed, let him touch to it his tongue, and then let him thrust the bit into the mouth of his horse, it he has the heart to do it. The horse is an animal of nervous organization. His mouth is formed of delicate glands and tissnes. The temperature of the blood is the same as in the human being, and, as in man, the mouth is the warmest part of the body. Imagine, we repeat, the irritation that would be caused the human, and consider that, if not to the same degree, still the suffering of the animal is very great. And it is not a momentary pain. Food is eaten with difficulty, and the irrtation repeated day after day causes loss of appetite and loss of strength. Many a horse has become worthless from no other cause than this.

Wintering Bees.

The beginner in bee-keeping may be truly told that nine-tenths of all his losses, vexations and troubles will come in the winter season, in a Northern climate. No matter how bees are wintered-on their summer stands, in winter bee-houses or in cellars-there 311 and 313 Felix Street will surely be losses, sometimes light and sometimes heavy. Apiarists have studied this subject in all of its phases for many years, but no one has been able to discover or invent any method of wintering that is sure to enable bees will it be possible ever to discover such a method, I think, owing to the following facts: 1. Severe cold weather causes bees to die when they are unable to change their position in the hive to reach their stored honey. They starve with an abundance of honey in another

2. Death by having lived their allotted time. Bees live less than six months generally; and when put into winter quarters in November or De-ing safely. They are also affected sometimes with a disease called dysentery-an immoderate discharge of their feeces, and this destroys many tamilies of bees, so that taking these conditions into consideration, it is not possible for any bee-keeper to winter his bees without loss every season.

would seem that scientific bee-keepers, after half a century spent in investigating the difficulties of winter bees, all sizes. the same climate; but they have not, and we find in our bee publications a Compound Fluid great diversity of opinion existing, some advocating wintering on the summer stands, some in cellars, some in winter bee-houses, and others in value. rious ways; but the three methods I have on hand Coffins of all sizes of the best quality.

All are layited to call and examine his stock worth y of special notice.
